INTERNET

Is the Internet making us stupid?

Pros

The speed and ubiqity of the internet is advancing for the worse

Studies have began to show that people that read digitally tend to skim over things more.

The speed of the internet has caused us to lose patience on much slower things

Iq scores have been falling with the rise of the internet

In the 20th century iq scores were rising with an average of 2 points per year

With the rise of the internet iq scores have been decreasing with an average of 7 points per year

With the rise of the internet we have started to lose the ability to do simple tasks

We use the internet for everything from writing emails to seeing who's at our front door.

People are more likely to order food than cook it our Iq scores have been dropping with the rise of the internet while our iq scores were rising an average of 2 points before the internet

Cons

Almost every technology advancement in the past has been feared by people

The Printing Press was said to be creating awful abundance of books.

The telegraph was said to be to fast for the truth

The internet has given a more equal and true place for people

Iq scores cannont be credited because they are know to be racist, sexist, and classist

The internet has given us much more information than we previously had changing how we preform things is not a bad thing

While we tend to look up facts now imagine how it was 30 years ago

just like everything in life the internet requires smart moderation

Iq scores have been shown to be racist, classist, and sexist.

While the internet can be bad in many ways, I think that with smart moderation we can use the internet in the best way possible. With the internet we can do things we couldn't do before so its not fair to say "is the internet making us stupid."
